BACKGROUND

Early in January 1967 the Scout Association of New Zealand held the first Venturer Scout Flying School. No one back then would have realised the significant effect the school would have on the New Zealand Aviation Industry. From its small beginnings to now its 51st year, the Walsh Memorial Scout Flying School has trained over 1619 potential Aviation Industry employees.

The 51st School will see 70 students attend a 2-week intensive aviation training experience. Many past students have pursued an aviation career and are now airline pilots flying for major airlines around the world; air force jet or helicopter pilots; or members of one of the many aviation trades such as Meteorology, Rescue Fire Service, Aviation Engineering or Air Traffic Control.

The course is intensive and covers essential aspects of aviation from time in the seat to theory lectures and operational functions

Of the 70 students who attended the 50th School in January 2016, 54 received a prize or scholarship of various values up to $3,000 to continue their flying training.

Air New Zealand is a major sponsor of the Walsh Memorial Scout Flying School and every year offers two top students flights in the state-of-the-art Boeing 787 simulator as an insight into the airline operation side of the industry.

Aviation, like many other adventurous activities, is potentially hazardous.

SCOUTS New Zealand recognises that there must be a three-way partnership between our organisation, the participants and their parents/caregivers to minimise risks. It is important that students and parents/caregivers understand that, although SCOUTS New Zealand uses only qualified instructors, there are risks involved.
